les ballets C de la B

les ballets C de la B (Ghent-Belgium) was founded by Alain Platel in 1984. Since then it has become a company that enjoys great success at home and abroad. Over the years it has developed into an artistic platform for a variety of choreographers. The company still keeps to its principle of enabling artists from various disciplines and backgrounds to take part in this dynamic creative process. As a result of its 'unique mixture of artistic visions', les ballets C de la B is not easy to classify. It is nevertheless possible to discern something like a house style (popular, anarchic, eclectic, committed), and its motto is 'this dance is for the world and the world is for everyone'.

Berliner Festspiele

Berliner Festspiele stand for a cultural programme where the new becomes visible. All year round, they host a multitude of festivals, exhibitions and individual events in two houses – the Haus der Berliner Festspiele and the Martin-Gropius-Bau. The combination and network of a festival house and an exhibition hall bears special potential for interdisciplinary project formats and the interaction of different forms of art. With the world premiere of "Requiem pour L.", Alain Platel and Berliner Festspiele continue a fruitful collaboration of several years

Requiem pour L.

Fabrizio Cassol, Alain Platel

Fourteen musicians from across the world come together around Mozart's Requiem. In reconstructing that Requiem, they merge their own musical influences with genres including jazz, opera and popular African music.

Appointed musical director, composer Fabrizio Cassol continues to write a personal artistic history in which he brings together different musical cultures around a theme. Again and again, he looks for ways to write new stories with existing work, with oral and written traditions. For the Requiem, he brings together musicians whom he previously worked with (in Macbeth and Coup Fatal, among others) with artists for whom this is their first collaboration.

On a theatrical level, director Alain Platel and the group look for a visual and physical translation of the images and associations that a Requiem conjures up: from the requiem mass to the mass grave into which Mozart was himself dumped.

Cassol and Platel find each other in the way métissages, the blending of cultures, manage to create a new universe. They previously collaborated on Monteverdi's Vespers for the Blessed Virgin Vespers - vsprs, 2006), Bach's St Matthew Passion (pitié!, 2008) and the western baroque repertoire (Coup Fatal, 2014).

Requiem pour L.

Fabrizio Cassol, Alain Platel

Cassol has made it abundantly clear that this reinterpretation of Mozart's Requiem is the most perilous musical undertaking he has ever attempted. This artistic adventure began some three years prior to its performance in Berlin (18 January 2018) when Cassol and Platel began to think about the next stage in their long-standing collaboration. It must have been conceived during the Coup Fatal tour, an encounter between 13 Congolese musicians and the European baroque repertoire, for which the two had joined forces to complete the finishing touches. Their very first collaboration, however, was more than ten years ago. This would normally have been the choir project with which the KVS in Brussels opened its renovated theatre. However, due to delays in the renovation work, VSPRS, based on Monteverdi's Vespro de la beata vergine, came out first. Then came pitié!, whose final performances in Kinshasa could be described as pretty historic. These created a strong link with the Congo that still resonates today.

An adaptation of Mozart's Requiem was what most appealed to Platel. This is probably because during that period, death had crossed his path a number of times: he had had to bid farewell to his father, had lost his faithful dog, and had sat at the deathbed of his mentor Gerard Mortier. For Cassol, the knowledge that Mozart had not finished the Requiem opened up the possibility of relating to it as a composer. Others had added to it, in different eras. Why not a fresh interpretation for a time in which the world has become so much bigger and the distances so much smaller?

Cassol found a beautiful edition of the Requiem in the library of the conductor Sylvain Cambreling and set about studying it. The variations in handwriting enabled him to distinguish the parts that Mozart had written from the additions made by others. However, it would be misleading to suggest that Cassol stripped away the additions and only retained pure Mozart. The original has also been reworked. Cassol has made sketches of it; an imaginary distillate that contains the essence of Mozart's writing and will always be recognised as Mozart. The texts have been reduced to their essence.

Equally, it would be simplistic to think that the additions are African. As Cassol reiterates: there is little that is African about the added rhythms or harmonies. For him, it is all part of a musical world of sound that he has always advocated and which is fuelled by specific musical traditions (pygmy, India, Mali) that have always been linked to equally specific forms of spirituality. Herein lies the great challenge for Cassol: imagining a different kind of ceremony for mourning that is neither Western nor African. It is likely that this need in him was also fuelled by a serious loss in his own private life, by an acute need for nourishing vitality.

What else did he do in terms of reworking? Anyone familiar with the Requiem will immediately think of mass choral singing. Cassol has replaced the masses with individuals, thus creating an alternative expressive space where the melodies follow on from one another. Consecutive vocal parts then become a clarification between people, thus making the Requiem something 'of the people'. Because of these vocal parts – often the only thing by Mozart that remained – Cassol needed a number of lyrical voices. For this he initially looked to South African opera singers that he had got to know through his work with Brett Bailey, for whom he adapted Verdi's Macbeth.

Generally the vocal distribution rests on a solid foundation of four voices: soprano, alto, bass and baritone. Cassol deliberately opted for triangles, omitting the bass. This allows for greater flexibility, whilst also creating a kind of instability. Across from the trio of lyrical singers stands a trio of black voices that hail from the oral tradition: the Brussels-based Fredy Massamba, alongside Kinois Boule Mpanya and Russell Tshiebua, the backing singers who already worked themselves into the foreground in Coup Fatal, and were also part of the Platel production Nicht schlafen. However, the voices do not always sing together and therefore cannot always seek support from one another. For Cassol, this is an extension of the idea of the fugue, which makes the music more joyful.

Mozart's score does not include an end for the Requiem. Generally, the end goes back to the beginning (Dies Irae), but for what Platel had in mind this would prove impossible. That's why Cassol gradually allows the Requiem to merge into the Mass in C. The Requiem is in D, which for Cassol means the most open, radiant tonality: joy that slowly slides into the heavier, darker and more dramatic C.

Cassol regards himself as the architect of this music. But let us not forget that the work is also informed by the input of the musicians during rehearsals. Thus the Latin texts of the Requiem or the Mass in C have their counterparts in Lingala or Swahili, with here and there a touch of Tshiluba or Kikongo. Russell Tshiebua often acts as a translator and text producer. Massamba recites in his mother tongue, Kilari from Brazzaville. Sometimes the translation comes first and the music second; sometimes there are first notes and only then the language that best suits them. However, the translations never differ fundamentally from the Latin texts.

The most difficult are the often-abrasive harmonies that are stacked up against one another in such an idiosyncratic way. This is most unlike the Congolese' or Africans' usual way of doing things and it requires a different cultural response; pretty complicated if you have to learn everything by ear, for in many places the score goes against what musicians are familiar with. It only falls into place when all the voices are filled in, which is why the musical rehearsals took so long (the first rehearsals date back to April 2017). It is not only a formidable challenge to bring together musicians with these different backgrounds; it is also important that these musicians are able to express their way of life in the music.

The figure three has always had a special place in masonic rituals. In order to pay tribute to Mozart and his freemasonry, not only are there triangles in the voices, but also three likembes (or thumb pianos). At times, the music becomes somewhat Cubist: in Confutatis, rhythms, influences and worlds collide to create a multifaceted image. Luckily Rodriguez Vangama, Cassol's right-hand man, is on stage, the orchestra leader of Coup Fatal who continues to exert such tight control on the band now. The euphonium or tuba (Niels Van Heertum from En avant, marche!) seems to belong to the angel of death, launching his appeal in Tuba Mirum; in Hostias it is as though it is creeping into the head of the dying L. The accordion underpins and undermines the vocal harmonies in equal measure, and the percussion acts as the proverbial knock on the door. We reach the borders of what is expressible. The one question left for Cassol to answer after this Requiem pour L is: after this, what is there left to do? There is a sense that it is finished.

Fabrizio Cassol, Alain Platel

Fabrizio Cassol

° 1964, Ougrée (BE)

For twentyfive years, Fabrizio Cassol is the composer and saxophonist of the band Aka Moon. He has often worked with choreographers such as Alain Platel (les ballets C de la B – vsprs, pitié!, Comp Fata!), Anne Teresa De Keersmaeker (Rosas), the Samoan Lemi Ponifasio (Mao Company), the Congolese Faustin Linyekula (studio Kaboka). In opera, he already worked with Philippe Boesman-Luc Bondy, in theatre with Tg Stan.

His close collaboration with KVS, the Flemish Royal Theatre, when led by Jan Goossens, was followed by an artistic residence in the opera De Munt La Monnaie (Brussels) led by Bernard Foccroulle.

Since 2012, he has been artist in residence at the Fondation de l'Abbaye Royaumont near Paris to continue studying world cultures. His particular interest in non-European music started after a trip to the Aka pygmies in Central Africa in 1992 and expanded to Asia (especially India) and Africa where he worked with the diva from Mali Oumou Sangare, the Griot Baba Sissoko and the Black Machine, the Indian master of percussion U. K. Sivaraman and the Senegalese Doudou N'Diaye Rose. As for the improvised music scene, he worked with Marc Turner, Robin Eubanks, David Gilmore, Magic Malik, Marc Ducret and Joe Lovano.

Together with DJ Grazzhopa, he created the first big band with 14 DJs and participated in the concept of the aulochrome, a new polyphonic and chromatic woodwind instrument built by François Louis.

He passes on his extensive knowledge of music from oral and written traditions, of chamber music or symphonic work in workshops and master classes all over the world, such as: at the Conservatoire National Supérieur in Paris, the Royal Academy in London, the Conservatory in Jerusalem, in Alger, Beijing, Berlin, Chennai, Tunis and Royaumont.

In 2017 he released with Aka Moon a collector box as celebration of their 25th anniversary, inclusive the new album 'Now' that returns to the roots of the group, presenting the original trio playing together.

Alain Platel

° 1956, Gent (BE)

Alain Platel is trained as a remedial educationalist, and is an autodidact director. In 1984 he set up a small group with a number of friends and relatives to work collectively. Emma (1988) signalled his concentration on directing. He was responsible for Bonjour Madame (1993), La Tristezza Complice (1995) and Iets op Bach (1998), with which les ballets C de la B (as the group was now called) rocketed to the international top. In the meantime his collaboration with Arne Sierens had a similar effect on the Ghent youth theatre company Victoria, with the three plays Moeder en Kind (1995), Bernadetje (1996) and Allemaal Indiaan (1999).

After Allemaal Indiaan he announced that he was stopping making productions. But shortly afterwards Gerard Mortier persuaded him to do Wolf (2003) based on Mozart for the Ruhrtriennale. The choir project for the opening of the new KVS marked the start of close collaboration with the composer Fabrizio Cassol. vsprs (2006) proved to be a turning point in his career. So far his work had been exuberant in both the diversity of performers and the themes, but now it became more profound and intense and revealed a world of passion and desire. And violence, as in Nine Finger (2007) with Benjamin Verdonck and Fumiyo Ikeda.

After the baroque pitié! (2008), Out Of Context – for Pina (January 2010) is an almost ascetic reflection of the movement repertoire of spasms and tics. Platel consistently continues to search this language of movement for incarnations of feelings that are too vast. The yearning for something transcending the individual is becoming more and more palpable.

In collaboration with director Frank Van Laecke, he created Gardenia (June 2010), a production in which the closing of a transvestite cabaret affords us a glimpse into the private lives of a memorable group of old artists. In 2015 Alain Platel and Frank Van Laecke renew their collaboration, this time joined by composer Steven Prengels, for En avant, Marche ! a performance about a society inspired by the tradition of fanfare orchestras and brass bands. C(H)ŒURS (2012), so far Platel's biggest project, is created on demand of opera director Gerard Mortier. He got to work with the famous choral scenes from Verdi's operas, later on he added pieces of music from Richard Wagner's works. In C(H)ŒURS he examines –together with his dancers and the Teatro Real choir – how 'dangerously beautiful' a group can be. The political connotation in performances such as tauberbach (2014) and Coup Fatal (in collaboration with Fabrizio Cassol 2014) lies in the joie de vivre and energy that is displayed on stage to show how people sometimes live or even survive in undignified circumstances (a landfill in tauberbach and the real living conditions of the musicians from Congo in Coup Fatal). "Lust for life" as a way of rebellion. It's this lust for life that pushes the dancers in searching the possibility for transformation in nicht schlafen (2016), a performance on music by Mahler, that carries the restlessness and sense of foreboding doom of an accelerating society.

But let it be clear, Platel is not just into large scale projects nowadays. In the recent past, he worked on small projects such as Nachtschade (for Victoria in 2006) and coaching work for amongst others Pieter and Jakob Ampe and their production Jake & Pete's big reconciliation attempt for the disputes from the past (in 2011). Two projects which have had a significant influence on his way of perceiving theatre.

He also almost surreptitiously entered the arena of the dance film together with the British director Sophie Fiennes (Because I Sing in 2001, Ramallah!Ramallah!Ramallah! in 2005 and VSPRS Show and Tell in 2007) and solo with de balletten en ci en là (2006), an impressive view of what goes on in a twenty-year-old dance company, taking us all the way to Vietnam and Burkina Faso, but also and mainly being an ode to his home town Ghent.

Boule Mpanya

° 1987, Kinshasa (COD)

Boule Mpanya grew up in Kinshasa. His father loved to play music at home and at parties, where Boule accompanied him as a dancer. He gave Boule every encouragement to develop his artistic talent. Boule joined a church choir as a singer. Then, together with his elder brother and some friends, he set up a group which combined pop music and hip hop. His singing talent also led to other horizons and discoveries, from a singer in a gospel choir or member of an alternative music group to collaboration with the music group Washiba. Shortly afterwards, he met Paul Kerstens, co-ordinator of the Africa operation in Congo from the Royal Flemish Playhouse in Brussels (KVS), who suggested to him that he should devote his knowledge to the Coup Fatal project with Fabrizio Cassol and Alain Platel. For more than two years, he did a world tour with Coup Fatal, which included over a hundred performances. The collaboration with Alain Platel continues in 2016 with nicht schlafen, a performance inspired by the work of Gustav Mahler. Boule Mpanya has worked together with scores of artists in his native land, mainly Christians, but also with international musicians such as Rokia Traoré, Marie Daulne, Fabrizio Cassol, and Fredy Massamba. Of all the styles of music which he listens to and likes, his favourite is salsa. Apart from his musical activities, Boule Mpanya has also developed an acting career, including a role in a Congolese TV series. At the same time, he has done a course in interior architecture at the Academy of Fine Art in Kinshasa.

Fredy Massamba

° 1971, Pointe-Noire (CGO)

Fredy Massamba grew up in Congo-Brazzaville and currently lives and works in Brussels. His parents instilled the love of music in him and he discovered Congolese rumba by listening to the radio. At the age of fourteen, he joined a choir, singing and playing percussion. In 1991, he was one of the founding members of the Tambours de Brazza, who went on to achieve international success. He collaborated with Zap Mama, Didier Awadi and Manou Gallo, to name but a few. In 2011, he released his first solo album, Etnophony, which was nominated for the African Kora Awards 2012 in Abidjan and was picked up by the European music scene. Makasi, the second album, followed in 2013. Fredy Massamba is a singer-songwriter whose work combines elements of soul, funk and African polyphonies.

Russell Tshiehua

° 1993, Mbuji-Mayi (COD)

Already at the age of 20, TK Russell has made an impact in the music world of Kinshasa. Author, performer, singer, and show man, Russell makes music which is very much his and his alone. A gifted composer, he started to write and compose music for himself and for others as early as the age of nine. And so, with original music, served by a powerful voice and stage presence, Russell dreams of letting his voice be heard and sharing his musical universe with the entire planet.

After working and collaborating with several national and international artists who have helped him to develop, such as Lokwa Kanza, Jean Goubald, Tshala Muana, Papa Wemba, Salif Keita, Rokia Traoré, Fabrizio Cassol, Fredy Massamba, the group Puggy, les Washiba, and such like, he started to put on his own concerts, which people will discover thanks to the group SADI at the time of the acoustic evenings at the Halle de la Gombe in Kinshasa.

This young artist has become a messenger of hope for his generation. Demanding and industrious, he searches constantly for new tones and doesn't have to worry about copying anyone. His roots are a distinctive feature and his open and creative spirit which feeds on rock, funk, techno, pop, RNB, and flamenco is a strength.

Alongside his individual work, Russell also participates in joint projects such as Sadi-Echos (a project to raise awareness concerning conservation of the natural biodiversity of the Congo basin, which is maintained by the WWF) as artistic director, composer, and interpreter of the songs on this album; he has also taken part in the creation of the tour for the show Coup Fatal created by Alain Platel, including a world tour which has been in progress for two years as a singer, dancer, and percussionist. The collaboration with Platel continues in 2016 with nicht schlafen, a performance inspired by the work of Gustav Mahler. His passion for music knows no bounds because it is for him a way of life.

His friend take a guitar and shows Kojack a simple melody of a few notes. Michel Seba

° 1973, Brussels (BE)

Michel Seba was born in 1973 nearby Arlon and grew up there amidst a family of passionate musicians. The sounds of his childhood are the bagpipe and the hurdy-gurdy. He starts his education with many traineeships at the Academie Internationale d'Été thanks to Chris Joris and Didier Labarre. After he finishes secondary school, the next logical step for him is to leave the south of Luxemburg and to go the Royal Conservatory in Brussels to study under the direction of Frank Michiels and Diederik Wissels.

His ability to mix different styles and his growing talent make him famous in no time and he is asked to join the greatest: Eric Legnini, Eddy Louiss, Toots Thielemans or even Eric Truffaz, Paco Sery and many others. He feels comfortable in every register, whether it is jazz, folk or world music. He proves that regularly when participating at festivals such as the Jazz Festival in Montréal, the Jazz Marathon in Brussels or the very famous Montreux Jazz Festival. Having gained his place in the Belgian music scene, he is often asked to give classes and workshops in Belgium at the Aktd of Libramont and abroad, more particularly in Burkina Faso and Vietnam. As he is such a diverse musician, he was also asked to play and/or record with Maurane, Axelle Red or Adamo, and to join the orchestra of “The Voice” Belgium. He also recorded several film tracks and commercials. He was part of many cross-over projects such as in theater and the contemporary circus of Féria Musica. Never shying away from any musical challenge, Michel was also part of the group Soledad inspired by classical music and tango nuevo. His participation in the latest creation by Fabrizio Cassol and Alain Platel, Requiem pour L. is yet another example of the artistic diversity that Michel appreciates so much.

Michel has also his own projects such as the music group Slang with François Garny and Manuel Hermia. This “ethnic-coltranian” jazz trio has recorded 5 albums yet and has been touring in every corner of the planet.

Hildegard De Vuyst

° 1963, Aalst (BE)

“Late ’94, I made my first tentative steps as a dramaturge, working for Het muziek Lod. When Lod started a coproduction in ’95 with les ballets C de la B for La Tristezza Complice, this was to launch a longstanding collaboration with director Alain Platel. I’m very proud of Iets op Bach, Wolf and vsprx, pitié! and Out of Context – for Pina. As a freelancer, I also worked with different choreographers from the same stable: Koen Augustijnen (To crush time) and Sidi Larbi Cherkaoui (Rien de rien). In the interim, I taught workshops (dance dramaturgy) in Amsterdam, Lublin and Aarhus; I taught at the Rits, the Brussels-based college for actors and directors; I set up a publication on the arts centres in Flanders (Alles is rustig) together with the Flemish Theatre Institute; I walked out on the X-group at P.A.R.T.S., etcetera...

Starting in 2001, life took on a fresh turn: the Koninklijke Vlaamse Schouwburg (KVS for short) in Brussels came under new management and I started work there as a dramaturge. The challenge to turn this dormant repertory theatre into a lively place that would attract the whole city was considerable. The efforts we brought to bear were enormous and the satisfaction was duly proportionate. In 2006, the new infrastructure that was rebuilt from scratch was ready for operation and inaugurated by the choir project in collaboration with Alain Platel and Fabrizio Cassol. This enables us to make an even bigger imprint on the heart of the city. Still, however far-reaching my commitments to the KVS may be, when Platel calls, I come.

It is also Alain Platel’s fault that I went to Palestine for the very first time in 2004. It has led to PASS (Performing Arts Summer School) a long term project that I coordinate with young Palestinian performers in collaboration with KVS, les ballets C de la B and the A.M. Qattan Foundation in Ramallah. The absolute highlight of this adventure is Badke, a production with ten Palestinian dancers, that will perform in Palestine in spring 2014.

Since September 2016 I joint the team of les ballets C de la B and am as dramaturge also part of the Festival de Marseille.”
